

Voting for health reform was right thing to do

To the Editors: I couldn't be prouder that our two congressional leaders, Rep. Carol Shea-Porter and Rep. Paul Hodes, did the right thing and voted for the health care reform bill. That's what we sent them there for. It was also refreshing that they did not fall for the Stupak amendment and voted against it.

Economists are in total agreement that this bill has to have three things or it's not worth it: One, portability from job to job; two, no pre-existing conditions; and three, a public option. The House bill does this. Now the Senate needs to deliver — with or without the Republican senators!
